

Chuck Loeb

(December 7, 1955 – July 31, 2017)

If you every wanted to be a musician, you would want to be like Chuck Loeb. In the dictionary next to the word flexible, there should be the above picture. Of course like most other musicians they improved their playing skills based upon past experiences. Chuck took it to a whole different level developing writing, scoring, arranging, producing and downright playing with about anyone anywhere.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Chuck_Loeb

Again, another musical knight has fallen way before his time. There is not much to say there. Chuck experience and dedication is match by few of the jazz artists of today's era. I will say that he help lead into the other great processional talents that marks men like Chuck with such greatness.

With that greatness comes responsibility, sharing, devotion, high moral character and downright love. I did not know Chuck, but I have known men like him. Their aurora is quickly noticeable and clearly seen. I wish I could have met Chuck. People like theses have a way of making you better at whatever your career may be.

Bill Somerville