

Is the Death
Of Democracy
Upon Us?

---

There are many out there who would say they told you so. The question can defiantly be asked. The answer well, that's another story. It is like when is Jesus going to return, no one knows. When will democracy end in America since it was an experiment in the first place. It was done bass akwards where most monarchs, fascist and dictator governments become the powerful in control first and the respect and loyalty is toward them from others with a document to follow. In America case, the loyalty was toward document first, with the loyalty towards that paper starting from the word go. The first president, government and the process was all from the paper. Since that time all questions of laws, rights and process have roots to that paper.

It is called The Constitution and it was a good thing it started that way. It may not have lasted as long as it did if it was not established first. Even though it lasted over 200 years, it has had its issues and has been attacked many times. If you ask many minorities, they may say that the Constitution was flawed from jump street. The whites loved it even though when it came when it comes to race, it was a legacy of hypocrisy. It may not have been in the words itself, but it was defiantly in the interpretation.

And it is at this point where the death of democracy is in questions. Many people interrupt the Constitution in different ways and as far as I can tell, none of them make sense. It seems to fall in the same category as the Bible as the many interruptions can be just as whacked. It is those interpretations that has weaken the Constitution to the point to Jan 6, 2021. There are many laws and amendments added to the Constitution based upon past attacks. It is another reason it has lasted as long as it has. When it came to surviving an attach, it did not take long to amend the Constitution to cover the element of that attack to keep from having a repeat event.

Robert M. Hutchins Quote: "The death of ...

After the 6th of January and with the acquittal of Trump, if the establishment want to keep democracy in play, there will defiantly be a need to perform some modifications to the Constitution and current laws. Because if there was one element that was behind the attack, it was the white supremacy (wp) group having taken their reasoning to a violence end.

The question maybe is why did it go to that level? Are we (the others) at fault for not addressing these issue sooner? Is the government (FBI, CIA, etc) at fault for not serious addressing these concerns? Has the wp infiltrated all elements of government, business and organization to a point that before investigations on those other agencies and organizations is done, internal investigations may need to be put in place first? It may seem that fault is being place at those in a minority status however, those questions may need to be placed for certainty from others. As it may be said these type of questions and direct approach should have been implemented a long time ago. Living under fear should have been over years ago as well.

---

There is no doubt it is over now. With Black Lives Matter and the many of minorities buying weapons of their own, there is little doubt that another conflict may very well take place with more injury and death.

History has shown that man does not learn until enough blood has been spilled. It becomes no different than in the middle east. How can peace be upon anyone with their family, friends and fellow combatants is being killed? In time the war may only end when either you run out of bullets or blood if not both. Then the reality sets in to where people become tired of it all. Then comes the questions of worth.

Bill Sommerville